

ABSTRACT

The mismatch between the distributions of acoustic models and features in speech recognition may cause performance degradation. A sequential bias adaptation (SBA) applies state or class dependent biases to the original mean vectors in acoustic models to take into account the mismatch between features and the acoustic models.